A dedicated team is available during the event. The Event Center features central air conditioning, generators, load and unload docks, backstage, IT room, changing room and its own kitchen.

With the same DNA of sustainability and respect to nature that has marked the hotel since the construction, the Comandatuba Event Center follows rational principles on use of physical space and thermal-acoustic isolation that saves energy. As already happens, all organic residues generated from events go to a recycling plant and are reused on landscaping.

A differential is the infrastructure that allows for theme dinners and luaus, in addition to open air live concerts as the Terra de Gabriela, an area aside the hotel's particular beach where tents and stages can be mounted for special events.

Tours and other leisure activities can be prepared in order to fit the event's schedule. The topography has soft waves and unbalances that, along with the sea wind, intensify the pleasure of playing and challenge the players' skills. The Ocean View bar joins the complex, which also features a store focused only on accessories.

The course is considered as one of the best in Brazil, according to the Golf Digest USA magazine. For those who did not have the pleasure of playing golf yet, a highlight is the beginning pack, including three classes on techniques, postures and basics, each with 50 minutes and a differential: a fourth class playing in the course with the instructor, for two hours.

SUSTAINABILITY

RESPECT FOR THE NATURE AND THE TRANSAMÉRICA COMANDATUBA COMMUNITY IS ONE OF THE PIONEERS ON ADOPTING SUSTAINABLE ATTITUDES AND ECOTOURISM IN BRAZIL

The Transamérica Comandatuba Island Hotel was born with a gift for environmental and social sustainability issues. Since the opening, in 1989, when some of the environmental concerns were yet in their early stages, the hotel already adopted actions and programs towards nature preservation and integration with local communities. Some of the most successful examples are the production of biodiesel from recycled corn oil, the responsible use of water and the recycling plant, that transforms organic residues into fertilizer, in a safe and ecologic way.

This behavior also involves the resort's guests that may join ecotourism and environmental activities, such as the Queloniatuba Project, that follows the birth and the walk to the sea of some 4,000 sea turtles every year. These actions are executed through a partnership with the Ecotuba Institute, a non-for-profit organization that gathers local people and entities for preserving the local biodiversity.

The integration with the population living around the resort shows the Transamérica's commitment with the daily lives of the island dwellers. In addition to employ the local workforce with continuous training programs, the hotel hosts exhibitions that preserve and value local culture, such as capoeira and demonstrations of ships arriving at the beach, coconut tree climbing, and fish net throws, among others. Another highlight is the incentive to sustainable economic activities for local communities, such as handcrafted objects made from material extracted from the coconut tree. Supported by the resort, the island inhabitants are producing handcraft with residues that was burned before. Now, in addition to reduce environmental damages, Comandatuba's artisans can sell their work in the Natural Fiber Ecotuba space, granted by the hotel. espaço Ecotuba Fibras Naturais, cedido pelo hotel.

When the Transamérica Comandatuba Island Hotel was opened?

The complex opened in 1989, after 4 years of construction. The Transamérica Comandatuba Island Hotel was born proposing to join sophistication and comfort in a region with an exuberant landscape, and the challenge to preserve everything that took millions of years for Nature to make. Since the opening, investments in maintenance and upgrading are continuous. Today, the Transamérica Comandatuba Island Hotel is the only resort in Brazil that is located in an island, with an infrastructure that is perfect to provide total privacy, with freedom and security to our guests.

How was the construction process?

During the construction process, 40,000 ferry trips were required to bring construction materials to the island. It was nothing less than 10,000 cubical meters of concrete, which equals to 27 metric tons, that required 1,500 trucks, 22,000 meters of rail tracks, 845,000 tiles, more than 8 million bricks, 7,000 ink cans, 270,000 floor tiles and an enormous amount of other building materials for a project that big. Even the grass came from São Paulo, in form of plates.

In order to carry all these materials for the island, ferries were specially strengthened to resist time and efforts. The ships endured trips 24 hours a day, carrying up to 3 fully loaded trucks. The building of a bridge between the mainland and the island would ease the job however the magic of the place would be compromised. During the four years of construction, some 15,000 people worked at the island. In some stages, the workforce reached 1,200 employees.

SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

WHAT ARE THE PROJECTS BEING DEVELOPED BY THE HOTEL IN SOCIAL AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESPONSIBILITY?

Chama-Maré Project

This project aims to preserve and research the ecosystem of mangroves, especially the uçá crab that is currently under threat of predatory collection and a massive mortality across the whole Brazilian coast. In addition of being one of the main species in charge of recycling the mangrove leaves, the uçá crab also is the economic alternative for several low-income communities.

Ecotuba Institute's biologists are carrying out research on the uçá crab population and diagnosing the social and economic situation of crab catchers. Also, ecotourism and environmental education activities are performed in a catwalk over the mangrove in the Transamérica Comandatuba, and in summer, campaigns are promoted to prevent catching and consuming the female crabs below sale size and in reproduction period.

Queloniatuba Project

Preservation and research of sea turtles in the Comandatuba Island is the goal of the Queloniatuba project. For such, when the turtles are laying their eggs, Ecotuba Institute's biologists patrol the beach in order to protect the nests of this species, threatened by extinction. The Project was started in 1995, when the Transamérica Comandatuba donated chicken eggs on a weekly basis, as a retribution for dwellers not eating turtle eggs and supporting the Ecotuba Institute to preserve the nests. Today, it is not necessary to donate the chicken eggs anymore, as communities beachside are integrated and aware.

Each dweller adopting a nest becomes a nature guardian, receiving diplomas and incentive giveaways. The Queloniatuba Project ensures that some 4,000 sea turtles reach the sea every season (from October to April).

Ecologic handicraft

Farms producing coconuts generate residues of leaves and bark that are usually burned, causing environmental damages. The Ecotuba Institute, since 1996, encourages the use of such residues by artisans that contribute for the preservation of local environment and still produce exclusive pieces that are exhibited and sold in the Natural Fiber Ecotuba space, granted by the Transamérica Comandatuba. A result of this work was the foundation of the Grauçá Artisan Association, comprised by the project's artisans and now is independent.

Trans-Ação Project

With this project, the Ecotuba Institute fosters the voluntary work of Transamérica Comandatuba employees, engaging them on cultural, social and environmental activities. Supported by the Hotel, forums and environmental education activities are being carried out by biologists, and a capoeira group, Nação Oruba, performs in several local communities in the city of Una.

Community integration in the Transamérica Comandatuba
This project's goal is to allow a higher interaction between the communities and the structure of Transamérica Comandatuba. Occasionally, cultural exhibits are organized by local residents, such as leaving the boat, coconut tree climbing, fishing net throw and capoeira. Equally, tours are organized with community members to know the Hotel's infrastructure, the golf course, airport and walking areas.
